COUNCIL'S CLEAR DUTY.

Mayor Mitchell has performed a distinct service for the property owners of the East Side in directing attention to the dangers involved by further delay in taking action to provide this section of the city with more adequate fire protection.

The situation with respect to the Yough bridge is such that the hazards which are incident to grouping all the fire fighting apparatus on the West Side are increased alarmingly. Merely calling attention to the matter, as the mayor has done, should be sufficient at this time to result in steps being taken to dispose of it. The time for argument or debate has passed. All the reasons for the establishment of a fire station on the East Side have already been set forth so convincingly that there is no necessity to repeat them. If more were needed they have been supplied by the bridge situation.

It is now a question of taking action and taking it quickly. Upon this the people of the East Side, and the West Side, too, will expect the members of City Council to be of one mind and that they will consider the proposition from the broad viewpoint of its prompt solution being in the interests of the public, not of a section or a group.

The East Side must have better fire protection. It is the obligation of the City Council to provide it with the least possible delay. The possibilities of great loss in event of a failure of the bridge which would prevent the fire department responding promptly to an East Side call, are too great for the city authorities to assume the responsibility of deferring action or further debating a question the solution of which has become the clear duty of the municipal body.

WHY NO CREDIT?

The report of the Fayette County Red Cross Chapter for the past quarter shows that a splendid work was done, but readers of it will mean no disparagement when they ask: Why is no credit given for what the Connellsville branch is doing?

The Connellsville office of the chapter is duly and properly credited with noteworthy achievements, but not so much as mention is ever made of the existence of the branch which has never ceased for a day to continue its ministrations to scores of afflicted and needy families and persons in this community.

LOCAL LITIGATION OF STATE-WIDE INTEREST.

The litigation that will result from the efforts of the Pennsylvania Water Company to prevent the drainage from mines in the Indian Creek Valley from being discharged into the stream, turning that company's source of supply, will be watched with interest throughout the state. Although the issues involved will constitute a test of the right of mining companies to drain their mines into streams, with the possibility of rendering them unfit for domestic or mechanical use, they may also develop into the adoption of a state-wide policy with respect to preserving the purity and potability of streams. This result becomes more probable in view of the fact that Attorney General Alter has intervened in the proceedings in behalf of the public.

It has frequently been suggested that the Legislature authorize a serious study of the whole question of stream pollution with a view to determining what can be done in the direction of safeguarding the interests of the people without imposing unnecessary hardships or burdens upon industrial enterprises producing forms of waste which, when discharged into streams, are more or less deleterious in their effects.

"Action of the attorney general," says the Harrisburg Telegraph, "is exercise of right of the commonwealth and indicates the importance of the proceedings not only to the petitioners, but to residents of other sections which are confronted with similar conditions or who may face them. It simply illustrates the necessity of having the whole question of pollution of streams by industrial wastes studied by the commonwealth so that a remedy may be found which will not stop business, but in which business can join."

For this reason the action will be which in principle affects more than the Indian Creek Valley. Communities in all parts of the state will be directly interested and more particularly those in which coal mining is an important industry.

Their request for an increase in wages makes it appear that the paperhangers are disposed to hang up the readjustment to peace time conditions.

The visiting postoffice inspectors were negligent in their duty in having overlooked the new postmaster rumor factory. They would no doubt have found that the regulations as to overtime were being very flagrantly violated.

With a record of 23 below Roaring Run lets the world know that its weather works is still doing business at the old stand.

Roaring in mind that there are but two more Sundays preparatory to Lent you will be astir as early to-morrow morning as you are for your usual week-day duties.

Red Tape in School Reports

Laird's Bulletin.

School teachers, the state over, are likely to voice their complete approval of the protest made by School Director Harry Donaldson, formerly of Unity township, now of Hempfield township, at the directors' convention, against the complicated reports which the state now requires from the schools, including statistics worked out to the nth degree.

There isn't any disputing the fact that within the past year or two, the State Department of Public Instruction has been requiring a lot of detailed information from the schools, as to attendance, health records, receipts, expenditures and so on.

There has been a great mass of detail work to be done.

The state would claim that this detail work is necessary in conjunction with the larger degree of supervision the state is assuming over the schools, and in conjunction with the large amount of money the state is contributing toward the maintenance of the public schools.

Probably, it also would be claimed that within a little while the reports required will be found much easier to furnish, as school heads and teachers become more familiar with the forms.

It may be taken for granted that when Director Donaldson entered his protest against the demand for so many statistics, regarding school activities, a lot of teachers, the state over, felt like applauding.

It is now a question of taking action and taking it quickly. Upon this the people of the East Side, and the West Side, too, will expect the members of City Council to be of one mind and that they will consider the proposition from the broad viewpoint of its prompt solution being in the interests of the public, not of a section or a group.

The East Side must have better fire protection. It is the obligation of the City Council to provide it with the least possible delay.

The possibilities of great loss in event of a failure of the bridge which would prevent the fire department responding promptly to an East Side call, are too great for the city authorities to assume the responsibility of deferring action or further debating a question the solution of which has become the clear duty of the municipal body.

Business In Government

Providence Journal.

Counting the millions to be saved on naval armament when the Washington agreements are embodied in treaties, we are apt to forget the early pledge of the Harding Administration to cut expenses by "putting business into the government." A reminder is furnished by the report that preliminary plans of the departmental reorganization committee, now in the President's hands, promise a saving of not less than three hundred millions a year.

The saving of approximately a million dollars a day, for every working day in the year, cannot be made without a drastic overhauling of the executive departments. There is much wasteful overlapping, which should be easy to correct, as a result of the growth of the organization since the government was founded without that guiding direction which controls the evolution of a business system. But some parts will have to be dug up by the roots. The most noteworthy feature of the plans, as outlined, is the consolidation of the War and Navy departments in a Department of National Defense. But in the aggregate, no doubt, rearrangements and consolidations among many divisions and bureaus will work the most effective results.

It is to be anticipated that the more radical proposals will meet with criticism, objection, perhaps aggressive opposition. The Cabinet heads must be brought into agreement, although as a matter of authority Congress may order any rearrangement it chooses. It is not to be doubted however, that the President will be supported by his official family in his purpose to put through a thoroughgoing reorganization, and Congress should not question details too closely so long as what is offered will reach the main objective.

BILL'S COMING BACK.

"I'll pay you tomorrow. Be here about ten. I'll have the money to give to you then. I can't pay you now for sufficient I lack. But I'll pay it tomorrow, for Bill's coming back."

"Who's Bill?" I inquired. "And what is he to me?"

And I got this answer: "It's this way you see. I did have the money to pay you, but still—

He needed a lot, so I loaned it to Bill. "He'll pay it tomorrow. He said that he would; He gave me his word, and his promise is good.

There are many ways methods are used and I don't know if Bill will be back."

I waited as I heard him and, shaking my head, "I've had many a promise just like that, and it's paid.

"And the risk you have taken is shaky, I fear."

But he answered: "He promised, and Bill will be here."

SUPPLY AND COST OF MINE TIMBER SERIOUS PROBLEM

Annual Consumption Has Increased to a Total of 993,865,000 Cu. Ft.

SOFT COAL MINES LEAD

In Quantity Used; Nearby Supplies Having Become Exhausted Shipments Must Be Made Over Long Distances; Conservation Measures

The annual underground consumption of timber by the mining industry of the United States amounts to 293,365,000 cubic feet, according to an estimate just made by the Bureau of Mines. Of this amount, 161,400,000 cubic feet are used in the bituminous coal industry; 61,600,000 in the anthracite mines; 31,500,000 in iron ore mines; and 49,125,000 in mines producing other ores. The increase in the annual timber consumption in mines since 1906 amounts to nearly 40 per cent.

A serious problem now confronting the mine operator in the important coal and metal mining regions in both the east and west is the noticeable decrease in the supply and quality of the timber in many mining regions, excepted with marked increase in cost, declares the bureau.

Perhaps 75 per cent or more of the timber used in the anthracite region in Pennsylvania is soft wood—loblolly and second growth yellow pine—most of which is shipped from the south. The cost of timber per ton of anthracite mined is 19.2 cents. During the period of 26 years from 1906 to 1920, the cost of round mine timber delivered in the anthracite region has increased from 6.6 to 27.5 cents per cubic foot, or more than four times.

No recent figures indicating the quality and cost of timber used in the bituminous coal regions of the east and middle west are available, but it is reasonable to assume that the same relative increase will obtain as shown in the anthracite region.

The consumption of round timber in the Lake Superior iron mines has increased from slightly more than 12,000,000 cubic feet in 1906 to 27,500,000 cubic feet in 1920, or two and one quarter times. During the same period the average cost rose from five cents a cubic foot to 24 cents a cubic foot, or nearly five times.

Throughout nearly all the coal mining districts of the west, the consumption and cost of mine timber has materially increased in the past decade. Likewise the more durable varieties of timber are becoming scarcer and the source more remote from points of consumption, consequently in many localities the less durable varieties must now be used.

It is obvious that one of the rapidly increasing items of expense in mining operations is the cost of timber, to say nothing of the labor cost of installation. Therefore, any practical means that may be employed to prolong the life of mine timber will greatly reduce mining costs, and effect important economies in operation.

Mine timbers are destroyed by four principal agents—decay, insects, fire, and mechanical abrasion. In general, more than 50 per cent of the timber used in the mines is destroyed by decay and insect attack, but, perhaps not to exceed 15 per cent of the total is subject to replacement, that is, where the working place will be kept open longer than the natural life of the timber.

Timber conservation may be accomplished in part by the better selection, preparation and storage of timber intended for mine consumption, but the most effective means is by treating the timber, to prevent decay, with some standard preservative before it is placed in the mine. It is needless to point out that only those timbers should be treated that will be used in working places which are to be maintained for a period of years sufficiently in excess of the natural life of the timber to warrant the use of treated timber. Neither should treated timber be used in places where it would be subjected to destruction by crushing rather than by decay.

It is believed that the artificial preservation of mine timber offers an attractive field in which important economies may be realized, and that the time is opportune for promoting timber preservation in the mining industry.

In Europe, particularly Germany, treated timber has been extensively used in the mines for a great many years, and in 1915, no less than 100 large and small timber treating plants for mines had been erected. However, in this country the mining industry has been slow to adopt the use of treated timber, notwithstanding the replacement of timber caused by decay often constitutes one of the principal items of expense.

The explanation of this is that mining timber in most localities, until the last few years, has been plentiful and comparatively cheap. As a result, no inducement was offered to practice economy in its use. Furthermore, mine operators in general have not been well informed concerning preservatives, treatment methods and costs, and the benefits to be derived from the use of treated timber.

The Bureau of Mines, in cooperation with the United States Forest Service, has only recently undertaken a systematic investigation of the decay of mining timbers, and its causes and prevention. The Bureau's observations to date have led to the conclusion that not only important savings in the cost of operation may be realized by the use of treated timber, but also that the prevention of mine timber decay will remove one of the principal sources of heat and vibration of mine air, which in turn has an important bearing on the problem of mine ventilation.

He Is Aiding in the Relief of Russia's Famine Sufferers

ACTIVE in the work of the American Relief Administration, which is engaged in carrying out its program of feeding the famine-stricken in Russia, is Edgar Richard, director of the A.R.A. when headquartered at 42 Broadway, New York City. "Our purpose is to save the lives of as many of these suffering unfortunate as possible," says Mr. Richard, who is also a member of the Purchasing Commission for Russian relief, appointed by President Harding shortly after the signing of the $20,000,000 Russian relief appropriation.

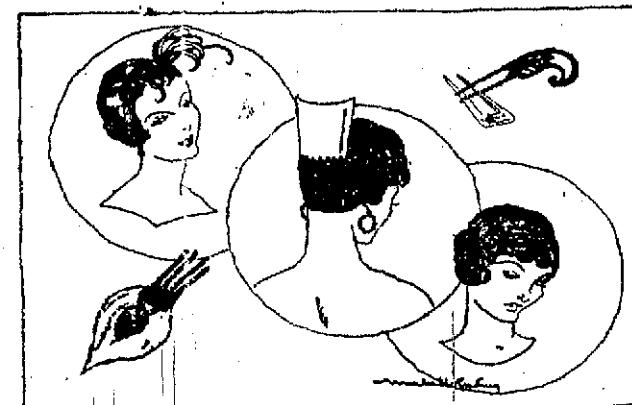

Herbert Hoover, chairman of the A.R.A., is the head of the Commission. Other members are from the Government, P. G. M. of Indiana, Dr. Jameson, a representative of the Farm Bureau and State Agricultural Commissioner for South Dakota, and E. M. Fleisch, treasurer of the U. S. Grain Corporation.

The Purchasing Commission for Russian Relief is bending every effort towards facilitating the speedy shipment of the needed commodities to the famine regions. Large quantities of sheep and grain, which are being shipped in America are being sent as fast as American ships can be chartered and loaded.

President Hoover has announced that 3,000,000 bushels of grain have been shipped as of January 25th and instructions given to rush the shipment of further cargoes.

In Europe, particularly Germany, treated timber has been extensively used in the mines for a great many years, and in 1915, no less than 100 large and small timber treating plants for mines had been erected. However, in this country the mining industry has been slow to adopt the use of treated timber, notwithstanding the replacement of timber caused by decay often constitutes one of the principal items of expense.

THE TIME TO BUY

It would seem that the time to buy anything is when prices are low which usually means good service and delivery.

Plumbing and Heating Supplies are approximately 47% lower than a year ago and many articles are selling at prices lower than during the year 1914.

It is the opinion among big buyers that the bottom has been reached in prices and many purchases covering requirements for the next twelve months is being made.

COLOR IN YOUR HOME

Do you realize the great importance of careful selection of wall paper and the influence of color and design exerted upon those who gather within the four walls?

In planning any room in the home it should be remembered that the wall paper will always be the dominant decoration. It will determine the color effect you get in the room. It will be cheerful or gloomy, warm or cold, larger or smaller, in accordance with the choice of wall paper.

High price does not always make a good paper, nor assure good taste. Some of the most attractive designs and colors are least expensive.

We cordially invite your inspection of our wall papers at any time.

We Are Often Asked

What Is the Best Kind of a Heating Boiler?

It is possible to use the cheapest make of boiler manufactured and get good results for a period of the life of the boiler providing the capacity is great enough and the piping and radiation is of sufficient size and properly installed in other words with good engineering and mechanics who know how you might use very inferior materials and still have a heating plant that would give good service for a short period of time.

With bad engineering and poor mechanics the finest equipment in the world will be a failure.

By the use of a well-known standard brand of material, good engineering and skilled mechanics you cannot fail in having a satisfactory heating plant.

Sellers' Plumbing Gives Home Comfort, Happiness and Health

Webster says a Plumber is "one who works in lead and then there are many other definitions of the plumber, some of which are not very complimentary."

Plumbing is really a very old occupation and we find trace of it in the olden times, for instance in the excavating of Pompeii elaborate systems of piping are found through which still flows pure, clear water from some source that is now not known probably a reservoir covered deep under ground by volcanic ash.

This piping is made of lead and is still in a state of good preservation. Public baths have been unearthed but the private bath was then unknown. Even Caesar, the most mighty Roman of them all was obliged to go to the public square for his morning bath.

No doubt King Solomon had trouble with his plumber getting into his private stock to say nothing of his own wife.

The writer's actual experience with Plumbing and Heating began about the year 1898 in Connellsville and since that time ever there has been great improvement in the methods of installing equipment of this kind as well as many new and modern appliances.

The clean, sanitary, Modern Bath and Kitchen and Laundry Fixtures in conjunction with a real honest to goodness Heating Plant are the things that bring comfort and health to the home and the knowledge of possession is a source of pride and happiness in any household.

It has been my policy for a number of years to prepare suitable plans and specifications in the way of a proposal to those who desire it in the plumbing of a home or other building covering modern and desirable Plumbing and Heating Installations for which no charge is made. I have no apology to offer in relation to my force of mechanics and we have many High Grade Installations to our credit in the city of Connellsville and the surrounding towns of which we are justly proud.

Peoples Loan Association Aids Hundreds To Build Homes Here

The Peoples Building & Loan Association, the oldest association of its kind in Connellsville, has expended more than a million and a half dollars in aiding citizens to build their homes in the First City of Fayette county. It has enjoyed a prosperous life since its organization in 1890 by a group of business men of the town and has steadily grown. There are at present almost 400 stockholders in the association.

In its 32 years of life the loan association has made on an average of 25 loans every year, or a total of approximately $600. The amount loaned each year is about $50,000. All loans were for the erection of homes, over 50 per cent of which were built in Connellsville. Other loans went to citizens of Fayette county, it being the policy of the directors not to make loans outside the county. Its total loans during that time are near $1,600,000.

The original officers were B. F. Boyce, president, Henry Goldsmith, vice-president, Samuel DuShane, secretary and J. M. Kurtz, treasurer. The directors at that time, including the officers, were Dr. J. G. McClellan, Henry P. Snyder, J. M. Reid, George W. McCullough, Lloyd Johnston and J. M. Cavender. The auditors were A. B. Hood and W. S. Yard.

Present officers are Henry Goldsmith, president, Joseph A. Mason, vice-president, A. B. Hood, secretary, J. G. Whitley, treasurer, and S. R. Goldsmith, solicitor. Directors are S. R. Goldsmith, S. P. Storm Country Polly

by Grace Miller White
Illustrated by R. H. Livingstone.

Copyright by Little, Brown and Company

One morning at daybreak Polly saw her father lift his gun from the wall and sit down to clean it. Now, why was he doing that, when he had known very well he could not use it? She stood looking down upon him, her heart beating rapidly.

"You ain't goin' to hunt yet, honey," she protested, squatting down beside him.

"Daddy!" she screamed.

No answer came from the blinking squatter.

"You caught him with the goods on," one man sneered at her.

"But you're goin' to leave him with me," she shrieked, making her appeal to the man who stood close to Jeremiah.

"Daddy'll promise not to hunt no more, won't you, honey? Oh, God! You said you wouldn't shoot nothin' the law said you couldn't."

"I didn't, brat," grunted Hopkins.

Then her eyes caught sight of the squirrel, and her jaw dropped. A horse's groan fell from him.

"I didn't shoot no squirrel, Polly," he cried out to her. "I got that big chuck I were tellin' you about?"

"That was true! No one knew better than Pollyop how they had missed the little she had received from Bennett."

Then, at heart, she snatched at his hand.

"We might best be without grub, Daddy," she said passionately. "A-w! Don't start rubbin' it up again! You'll get pinched if you hunt out of season, no matter what you shoot. For less than carryin' a gun, Old Marc's got a bunch of our men. You shan't do it, Daddy. You shan't, I say!"

If only she could persuade him not to hunt until Robert had come to an understanding with MacKenzie. If he didn't succeed—then she knew another way.

"Mebbe in a little while you can hunt all you like, Daddy," she ventured softly.

"What do you mean by that, brat?" asked Jeremiah, centering his keen eyes upon her.

She leaned forward and slipped both arms about his big waist.

"I don't want you to go today, Daddy," she returned noncommittally. "Why don't you just stay at home, an'—"

"Nope, I'm goin'," interrupted Hopkins. "An' Jerry's a-goin' with me.

"I'll be back before any of Old Marc's men turn over for another nap."

Polly knew her father well enough not to make another appeal. She creased Woe Jerry at Jeremiah's command, and then, troubled in spirit, watched him stride away in the keen morning air.

It had been decided among the squatter men that to keep the breath of life in their women and children they must hunt and fish, but that nothing should be caught that the law forbade. It was this thought that was running through the squatter's mind as he crept up to see if a woodchuck had ventured out. One was sitting up, taking a survey of the neighborhood, when Hopkins lifted his gun and with one sharp crack and a hot splash of smoke the fury fellow tumbled over.

The squatter stood stock-still and was in the act of picking it up when three men appeared as if they had sprung from the earth and with raised rifles closed in upon him.

Jeremiah's huge jaw dropped at the sight of them, and Woe Jerry's fingers caught tight hold of his hairy hair.

"Drop that gun," cried one man, and the stiff smacked rifle fell to the earth.

It took but a moment to snap a pair of handcuffs about the God-forsaken's wrists. It was with a quiet, the squatter was turned toward the quiet, the squatter went away with the dead woodchuck. Then the three slipped a chain around the God-forsaken's wrists and led him down the hill to the red rocks, the child still clinging to his neck.

CHAPTER X.

As in a nightmare the squatter girl blundered along the path, back to the hot, burning Woe Jerry in her arms.

Granny Hopkins was hobbling from the chinkhole when the girl stumbled over the threshold.

"Something awful happened, hub," Pollyop, the woman fainted, and limping across the floor, she bent and gathered the thin, small body to her.

"Come to Grandmama, Jerry dear," she coaxed, "an' heart a weep bit about Love."

The croaking voice, choked with sputtering, touched the edge of Polly Hopkins' soul. She swayed forward to her knees, caught the one withered hand extended to her and clung there.

"I'll set my bird," mumbled Mrs. Hopkins, and she dropped into a chair with Jerry in her lap. "There! Aw! Don't cry that way, honey, honey! I'm, deah heart, God's everywhere! Ah, His love, too. Can't—"

Out of the shower of glistening tears appeared a wan, tearful face. "Daddy's been took to jail, Granny Hoppy." Pollyop burst out. "God can't—"

Survey of the feeding grounds of migratory wild birds and recommending measures for improving them.

In continuation of the nationwide investigation on bird migration the information of the survey covering habits, distribution and migration of birds has increased and becomes very valuable.

Further study has been made of such injurious rodents as ground squirrels, pocket gophers, rabbits, kangaroo rats, and porcupine in order that more effective means against their depredations might be found and made available for use by Amherst farmers.

Under the protecting care of the bureau big game on government reservations has multiplied fast. The annual census shows 509 buffalo on such reservations now, as compared with 207 five years ago; 364 elk, as compared with 150; 102 antelope, as compared with 40; and so on.

Care of the birds progressed materially during the year through protection and defining boundaries of many of the bird refuges, the planting of grain to provide food and cover, establishment of new reservations, protection of additional warden service at certain reservations, and increased number of patrol boats.

The foregoings states in bare outline some of the bureau's activities within the United States. In Alaska the bureau assumed, under the department jurisdiction over all land fur-bearing animals, continued its investigation as to their habits and best methods for their protection, and enforced the laws prohibiting or restricting the killing of such animals. One of the chief items of interest in connection with the bureau's work in Alaska was its study of the reindeer industry in the territory, with a view to establishing it on a sound basis, by improving the health and general condition of the herds.

Made Smoother, Less Dangerous.

MAN SPRINGS BROKEN

Those and Jolts Motorists Have ciety; Other Dunbar News Notes.

Special to The Courier.

DUNBAR, Feb. 18—Township Supervisor: Fred C. Smith deserves commendation for the good work he has done at the railroad crossing at the Harper School House. This crossing is at a junction of the Center Furnace and Franklin road, the former turning at so sharp an angle that it was both troublesome and dangerous. More than one auto spring has been broken and much profanity provoked by this crossing, and the wonder has been that it had not been remedied years ago. Mr. Smith, although induced into the office less than six weeks ago, has already remedied this nuisance by extending the sewer and crossing planks 12 feet, giving plenty of room for trucks to make the formerly troublesome curve, and so widening the road that two autos can now pass without danger of a collision. He has other improvements in contemplation, and the people are hopeful that an era of better roads will be their lot.

It is unfortunate that the proposed Pechin-McGee shortline public road, reported and approved by the viewers last week, will have to remain status quo until the first Monday of June when absolute approval is given. The law requiring that three months' time must elapse from the time it is presented to the court, which will be the first Monday of March when it will likely be approved nisi, before it can be confirmed absolutely. As soon as this legal formality is completed with the road will be opened forthwith. The people will welcome the time when this can be done, for they have suffered so long this uncalled-for road inconvenience, that they can fully appreciate the benefit the road will bring them.

Rev. Fred Diddle, pastor of the Cove Run Free Methodist Church in Younger Hollow, is conducting a series of meetings in Pechin Chapel this week, beginning Wednesday night. The interest is growing and it is probable the meetings will be continued into next week. Rev. Diddle is a forceful and earnest speaker and is making a good impression with the people. A body of singers from Cove Run accompany him, and good music is one of the features of the meetings. Everybody is cordially invited to attend.

Mrs. Frances Weimer of Ferguson road has the first batch of chicks reported in this community. They were hatched the 7th, and all are doing well in spite of the severe winter weather.

Roger Yanger moved his family last week from Pottstown in south Dunbar to his recently purchased farm on the road between Connellsville and Normaville, well up toward the latter town.

R. A. Hodkey, who has been at Cresson sanitarium for several months, is home on a 15-day furlough. He is much improved in health and is hopeful that by warm weather he will have fully recovered his health and can leave the institution.

Mrs. Alex McConnell, Jr., who has been quite ill with pneumonia, is improving and expects to be out in a week or 10 days.

The doctors are getting the mastery of the grip in this section, so no new cases having been reported during the present week, and those who were suffering are reported all improving.

The snowdrops on the lawn at J. L. Koffler's were showing their petals last week, several having come out fully on Saturday. The crocus plants were also beginning to shoot above the ground, promising early bloom. All are now quietly sleeping under the snow which does not injure them, and are in readiness when milder weather removes the snow.

Miss Carrie Fowler, clerk in the First National Bank here, was visiting in Uniontown Thursday afternoon.

Never Wants Anything Else.
"I tried many different kinds of cough medicine," writes Mrs. E. K. Olson, 1917 Ohio avenue, Superior, Wis., "but I never want anything else than Foly's Honey and Tar. I used it for all my children and also for my grandchild. It has always done fine work." Foly's is a pure, wholesome and absolutely safe remedy for the relief of colds, coughs, croup and whooping cough. Children like it and it doesn't savoring and snuffing. At the Theatres

THE SOISSON.

A novel touch has been given to "Flower of the North" at the Soisson today. This touch is found in the prologue, which shows the North country in the days of the French chevalier when knights fought for a fair lady's hand. This comes in decided contrast with the story itself, which deals with the North country at the present day. All the scenic beauty of the Northland and no ideal case of players selected because of their fitness for the roles make this picture one of the biggest Curwood productions to be presented to the American public. It is a story that moves.

Monday and Tuesday, "Mamma's Affair."

THE PARAMOUNT.

Frank Borzage, noted screen director, who won an international reputation when he supervised the production of "Flamenco" from the story by Fannie Hurst, has done another notable piece of work in "The Duke of Chimney Butt," in which Fred Stone, the famous musical comedy comedian, appears on the screen of the Paramount Theatre today. Borzage knows the West like a book and as all of the action of "The Duke of Chimney Butt" takes place in the open country of Wyoming, you may rest assured the picture is well done.

Monday and Tuesday, "What No Man Knows."

THE ORPHEUM.

A sledge-hammer blow is delivered against conviction on circumstantial evidence in "The City of Silent Men," the new Paramount picture starring Thomas Meighan, which is being shown at the Orpheum today. The production is founded on John Moroso's novel, "The Quarry." Mr. Meighan plays the role of a small town youth who is made the tool of murderers and sent to prison for a crime of which he is innocent. The photoplay shows prison life in all its phases and is atrrict with heart interest and appeal. Mr. Meighan has in this one of the strongest roles he has portrayed in many a month.

Monday and Tuesday, "Clay Doll."

Wieners and Sausages Given Coat of Paint

Special to The Courier.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—The Spring of the markets of Western Pennsylvania with wieners and other sausages painted with coal tar dye preparations has been discovered by agents of the Bureau of Foods of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. As a result, Director James Foust of the Bureau of Foods has instituted a crusade that will include every section in the western part of the state.

It has been found that some unscrupulous manufacturers have been painting their wieners and bologna sausages with coal tar dye to give the meat a bright red color.

Agents of the Bureau of Foods have been instructed to secure samples of sausages from every dealer in the western part of the state handling the painted products. The Act of 1911 specifically prohibits the sale of sausages of any kind—"If it contains any coal-tar dye, boric acid or borates, sulphuric sulphur dioxide, sulphuric acid, or any other substance injurious or deleterious to health."

The law also prohibits the sale of sausages containing cereal flour or more than five per cent of added water.

Director Foust appeals to the public to assist in the crusade by not purchasing coal-tar painted sausages, as the dye is used to conceal inferiority or to make the product appear better than it really is.
